Swap Meet outcome is "pretty good," and there's still more to sell

By Robin Will

Every Swap Meet is different – some years our club comes home with buckets of money, and other years we wonder why we bother.

Of course, the hobby is changing. Our [donated] inventory has its ups and downs. If the weather is too nice, people stay outside, and if National Weather Service is predicting damaging windstorms, only the real diehards bother to show up at all. The Internet has changed the way people buy and sell old car parts. And so forth – we can think of a dozen ways to answer the simple question, "How did it go at Swap Meet?"

This year, we came home with about $700 in profits, which isn't great but it's not the worst we have done.

Several high-priced items didn't sell, and they are slated for eBay or Craigslist, where high-rollers go to look for very specific things. This includes the chromed horns for a '33 Plymouth, complete with mounting brackets, virtually unobtainium, which will probably bring $1,000 from the one '33 Plymouth owner in the country who desperately needs them. We haven't met him yet, but we know he's out there. Phil Lapin and Jerry Dixon, who handle our Internet sales all year long, have their work cut out for them.

We signed up three new members to CPPC, and renewed our relationship with an old member who hasn't participated for a while. That's good news.

Gary Rusher has been wheeling and dealing over a whole hangar-full of Plymouth stuff up in Stevenson, WA. He brought some of it (good stuff!) to this year's show, and sealed a deal for quite a bit of the rest of it by phone, while he was at the Swap Meet. We'll have good inventory again next year!

All considered, we were encouraged, and when the time came, we didn't hesitate to put down the money for the same number of booths for next year.

The Steering Column, A Message from the President

I am glad to report that Jim Wheat, board secretary and I will be going to the POC National Meet, July 24-29, in Northville, Michigan. We will be going to represent the Cascade Pacific Region, on behalf of all of you. We will probably have a lot of fun while there and I will be anxious to report back on our experience.

Portland Swap Meet, April 6-8 at Portland Expo Center, was a success once again. Even though we did not have a lot of high dollar items to sell, after the swap meet stalls were paid for next year, we still came out substantially ahead.

Thank you to Gary Rusher, other members of the Tech Committee, and other members worked hard to get things ready for the swap meet and load the trailer.

One puzzling thing from the swap meet was, we had a smaller than usual group of CPPC members, to help with duty than I can ever recall, but the ones we had were a big help and met lots of eager car owners. Swap meet duty, is really, not a lot of work, if you like to visit with car people about cars, car parts and talk about your own cars,

New CPPC members joined at Swap Meet

Three new members joined CPPC at Portland Swap Meet, and another long-absent member re-joined.

Jeff Howell, of Turner, joined for the first time. He has a 1940 Plymouth PT105.

Wes and Debbie Moore, Riddle, OR, are likewise brand-new members, with a 1938 Plymouth coupe.

Darrell and Tammie Schill are new. They're from Kelso, and they have a 1948 Plymouth 4-dr sedan.

David Martin is back after an absence, with his wife Valerie. They have a 1933 Plymouth sedan they say is "modified."

We welcome all of them to Cascade Pacific Plymouth Club.

which I was chastised for by my wife for talking so much. I am hopeful, when the CPPC Cruise-In comes up in August, everyone will be ready to pitch in to make it a great success.

A plus from the swap meet was, we added 3 new CPPC members and a former one came back to the club. We met many potential new members, shared parts advice to person after person and discovered some leads for parts for next years swap meet.

By the time you get your newsletter the new Membership Roster will be at the printers. Many thanks to the help of Pam & Randy Ealy, Robin Will, Dolores Call and Jim Wheat and quite a few emails and phone calls to vet members information. Pam has put together what, I am sure is one of the most up-to-date spread sheets of all time, which I used for the roster. The bottom line is, after adding and subtracting members, we have increased membership this year to 115 members/families.

I hope you all got my email asking for your help for the upcoming August Cruise-In at Clackamas Community College. You can help make this event an even bigger success by securing raffle items, sponsors, trophy sponsors and general donations. I know several

OFF THE HOOK -

Adhesives & Sealants, Pt. II

By Phil Lapin / Technical Coordinator

In the March 2018 CPFC newsletter, I began an article about adhesives, fillers and sealants used in automotive applications. There are many types of adhesives that can be of use in the automotive garage, but I wanted to cover some of the most commonly used materials. Cyanoacrylate Adhesives ("CA") glues were discussed in March. "Super Glue" is a well known brand of CA glue. This month will conclude with Resin, Polyurethane, Seam Sealers and Styrene adhesives. The entire article can be found on the Tech Committee page of our website (CascadePacificPlymouth.org)

Resins

Epoxy and Polyester are two common forms of resin used in automotive applications. They are two part systems which must be mixed in a specific ratio of resin and catalyst.

Epoxy resin comes in many forms, with variations in setup time which can range from slow to fast. Compared to CA adhesives, "fast" epoxy is still very slow! Filler materials (powdered metals and such) can also be added to epoxies to enhance strength. It can even be purchased in a putty like formula. J-B Weld is a popular brand that makes filled epoxy of several types. Cast iron, metal to metal, steel, some plastics, woods and other materials can be bonded or filled with epoxy resin based adhesives. Epoxy resins are very commonly available in hardware stores.

Another resin is polyester - commonly used in fiberglass products (polyester resin plus glass cloth). Fiberglass can be used in vintage autos for body repair work, as well as for reinforcing of weak structural areas.

Another form of polyester resin uses powdered filler materials - and it is known as "body filler"! Bondo was one of the first brands of this product. Body fillers come in a basic mix, as well as a thinner paste which is for final smoothing and filling. Normal body fillers, because of the additives used, are not totally impervious to moisture. Regular body filler should not be used on rough welds or areas that cannot be sealed. There are special formulas for applications where moisture could be a problem. Polyester resin is available in both automotive and marine supply stores, as well as some hardware stores.

Polyurethane

Another commonly used adhesive is urethane. It is a one part adhesive which interacts with moisture to cure. "Gorilla Glue" is one well known brand. It will bond to many materials, and is waterproof. What I do not like about these materials is that they tend to expand - which can cause oozing out of joints. It is not easy to clean up. A variation of urethane which I have found very useful in auto repairs is the aerosol can form. Hardware stores sell it for sealing cracks and joints in buildings. It works equally well on autos

- where it can be used to seal, fill and waterproof difficult to get at voids and openings.

Seam Sealers

Modern vehicles have seam sealants slopped all over joints - some visible, some not. Vintage cars did not have the advantage of these compounds (save for tar materials). Automotive stores carry sealers - both in "caulking tubes" and cans. It is the consistency of toothpaste, and can be spread or brushed on. Setup time is fast, but it works very well. Shrinkage is significant and it cannot be sanded well, but the end product is flexible and can be painted over.

Styrene Adhesives

Basically a synthetic form of rubber, these products squeeze out of a tube and are applied in a heavy coating. They remain somewhat flexible, are waterproof and bond very well to fabrics, rubber, vinyl fabrics and many other surfaces. "Goop" and it's many variants are one well known brand. They produce formulations for household, auto, marine and other applications. "Shoe Goo" is another of their products!

Weather was marginal at the Tulip Farm; CPPC members had fun anyway

By Jerry and Joanne Dixon

As many of you know Saturday, April 14th began as a rainy, cloudy day and we left for Shari's in Oregon City wondering if any other brave souls would come along for the short drive to the Wooden Shoe Tulip Festival in Woodburn.

We were happy to meet new members Clark and Diane Taylor from Washougal. Bob Maker drove his Viper powered Studebaker Sedan Delivery and joined our small but enthusiastic group. Don Smith joined us at Monitor driving his beautiful 1940 Dodge Sedan.

The tulip fields were absolutely stunning even with the blowing wind and muddy rows. Boots were a very popular wardrobe accessory. We did some shopping (no wind in the crowded gift shop!) and rode the hay wagon. We actually had no rain, and the wind did not deter us from gazing at the incredibly beautiful fields of rainbow like colors of tulips.

Our three cars brought lots of attention – and the possibility of three new members.

Wouldn't you know as we were heading for home the sun decided to show itself and it was a beautiful ending for a small but enjoyable CPPC tour.

At Taylors', a hotrod '38 Plymouth coupe comes together slowly

This car has a hard-luck story – purchased in pieces after a fire, then neglected for eight years before Chuck Taylor found it and brought it home.

Chuck had it wet-sandblasted to remove the old primer and bondo, then re-sprayed it to protect the metal. He swapped in the rear axle from a 1999 Ford Explorer (for the disk brakes) and added a set of airbags to be able to tweak the suspension for shows or street driving.

He installed a Chevy 350/TH350 combo, and is now figuring out clearances for his alternator and power-steering pump. Oh, yes, and a steering column . . .

Staying warm was the order of the day at Wooden Shoe Tulip Farm. Top, Joanne Dixon. Center, Don Smith (in his car), Clark Taylor and Jerry Dixon. Bottom, Diane and Clark Taylor.

"It's like putting together a metal Chinese jigsaw puzzle with no instructions," he says, and admits he loves it.

CPPC will surely be seeing more of this project as it comes together.

MAYFLOWERS

The Mayflowers' entire purpose is to get out and visit interesting people and places in the Pacific Northwest. Everyone is welcome to join in.

Adelman's Peony Gardens and Schreiner's Iris Garden are next Mayflower destinations

On Thursday, May 17th the Mayflowers are going to tour Adelman's Peony Gardens in Brooks, OR in the morning. After lunch at a local restaurant, those that wish can also tour the Schreiner's Iris Garden which is close by. It is peak season for blooms in both of the gardens so, weather permitting, it should be a wonderful outing. A signup sheet and additional information will be available at the April 24th general meeting. If you have questions or want to sign up and won't be at the meeting, you can contact Mindy Benfield or Lorraine Griffey.
